PROPOSALS

BY BENJAMIN DAVIES,

For publishing by subscription, a periodical work to be entitled The Philadelphia Magazine and Review; or, Monthly Repository of Information and Amusement.

AFTER the many fruitless attempts, which have been made to establish a publication of this kind in Philadelphia, the proposals now submitted, will, perhaps, at first sight, appear to be nothing more than soliciting disappointment. When, however, we observe an eager sea of after knowledge spreading through all parts in our country, and when we consider, that, in these pursuits, Magazines and Reviews are of universally-admitted utility, we are led to believe, that former undertakings in this way have failed from some other cause than the want of discernment or liberality in those, to whom the Editors looked up for support.

From causes, which are too evident to need enumerating here, America is, and long must be beholden in a very considerable degree, to the presses of Great Britain. The literature of the two countries is, indeed, a sort of common stock; but, for one publication of ours, we receive, at least five hundred in return. While this is the case, it is extreme folly in the publisher of a periodical work, to reject, from a sort of spurious patriotism, all information, however useful, and all amusement, however delightsome, merely because it is not of native production. Obvious, however, as the justice of these remarks must appear we have very little doubt in our minds, that an obstinate adherence to a contrary notion has been the principal cause of the want of success, experienced by those who have gone before us.

Reason and interest unite in dictating to us a different plan. The Miscellaneous part, and principal part, therefore, of the Philadelphia Magazine, will consist of choice selections from the newest publications of merit, that shall appear in Europe; but, particularly from the various periodical works published in Great-Britain, of which we have taken care to insure the very earliest supply. At the same time, we trust it is unnecessary to say, that we shall always receive with pleasure any original productions of genius, in verse or prose, of our own country; and we flatter ourselves with the hope of being often favoured with the agreeable task of giving to such productions merited praises and extensive publicity.

In selecting and arranging these materials, to suit the various tastes of our readers, we are sensible how difficult a task we have undertaken. To please all, we do not expect: it would be a vain presumption. But we are resolved to give offence to none, so far as consists with the superior respect we owe to the sacred cause of religion, morality, and social order. In these are involved the glory and welfare of our country, and they will always be the Polar-star, that shall guide our labors.

The Miscellany will be followed by a monthly Summary of News and politics, foreign as well as domestic; under which head will be comprised a succinct account of the Proceedings of the General and State Legislatures, and the titles, at least, of all the laws they shall enact.

The next part of our undertaking, is a Review, of the principal works of note published in Great-Britain. For this we must necessarily have recourse to the Reviews of that country. Though it will be impossible for us to furnish as complete an analysis as that from which we shall take our materials, we shall not fail to give such an account of every publication reviewed in that country, as will convey to our readers information sufficient to enable them to avail themselves at a very early stage, of every valuable performance that shall appear. The advantages arising from such information are evident. For want of it our professional men and men of taste are always kept a year or two in the rear of those of Great-Britain. We do not hear of a work till a long time after it is published, and many very valuable ones we never hear of at all. All the various injuries and privations we suffer from this source will, we flatter ourselves, be entirely done away by a steady adherence to our plan.

To that of foreign, will be added a Review of Domestic Publications; and here, we must confess, that we feel some diffidence, because the execution of the task must depend, in a great measure, upon the abilities of ourselves. However, with a firm resolution to be guided by decency, candour and truth, and to take genius and virtue by the hand, whenever, and in whatever garb, we may find them; with no wish to wound the feelings of any but the wicked, and with the most sincere desire of seeing our countrymen shine in every department of literature, we doubt not, that we shall be able to acquit ourselves to the satisfaction of all those who have the good-nature fairly to appreciate our motives, and the justice to make allowance for human imperfections,

The work will close with a monthly record of Marriages, Births, Deaths, Promotions, and other casual incidents.

As to what concerns the politics of this country or of Europe, at this momentous period, we shall always view with jealousy every measure of the French Government, and it's ever active emissaries; and if in this respect some men consider us as partial or prejudiced, we shall submit to their censure. For so full is our conviction that the war, which now desolates Europe, and menaces this country, is a war of ambition and plunder, on the part of France, that nothing can induce us to conceal our sentiments, or to withhold the small assistance that we can contribute to oppose them. For this reason we intend to devote a page or two of every number to historical facts, anecdotes, and remarks on the Politics of France, from the age of Louis the Fourteenth to the present more alarming epoch. For more than a century past has that restless and ambitious people been like a volcano in the centre of Europe, disturbing the surrounding States by its intrigues, and once in every eight or ten years overwhelming its most fertile countries with devastation and carnage.

Indeed it is more than eighteen hundred years since the great Roman Orator* thought it his duty to warn his countrymen against that conduct and those principles, for which the present race of Gauls are as justly to be dreaded as their savage ancestors; "Gallis fidem non habendam, hominibus levibus, perfidis, et in ipsos Deos immortales impiis."

By the proper management of this topic our countrymen will be able to see the real character of the nation, which they formerly considered as their friends, but now more justly execrate as their most dangerous enemies; and they will be better prepared to appreciate any overtures, that may be made hereafter, for the restoration of peace and amity,

In the execution of this part of our design, particularly "we look with confidence for the support and assistance of all persons who shall consider our motives as laudable, and therefore wish to contribute to the success of our design;—of all who think, with us, that the press has been too long an engine of destruction, and that it ought, at length to be rendered a mean of preservation, and an instrument of protection."

* CICERO.

"Literature, well or ill conducted, is the great "engine by which, I am fully persuaded, all ci- "vilised States must ultimately be supported or "overthrown." Pursuits of Literature.

CONGRESS,

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Debate on Mr. Griswold's motion.

(CONCLUDED.)

FRIDAY, December 28.

Mr. Macon said, that notwithstanding the admonition of the gentleman from N. York, who generally occupied unnecessarily as much time as any member in the house, he wished to say a few words on this question. It was said this proposition was necessary for defence. He had waited with some impatience to hear what sort of defence it was to afford, without being gratified. At the last session, it was said that certain laws, which had since proved very obnoxious, were intended as objects of defence, but he had never heard of any they had afforded, and this measure appeared to be of the same description, bro't forward for the purpose of anticipating another question, viz. a motion for repealing the alien and sedition laws. He believed, if gentlemen wished to provide defence for the country, they must do it by means of guns, powder, and men, and not by such laws as these.

Mr. M. said he had heard a great hue and cry against a French party in this country. If such a party exists, why can they not be pointed out? It might as well be said that there is a British party in this country. He believed there existed full as much reason for saying there is the one as the other. His reason for thinking so was, that great part of the commerce of this country is carried on by means of British capital, and British subjects are seen from one end of the continent to the other. And will not this capital, and these persons, produce a British interest?—They will and do. The diplomatic skill of France, Mr. M. said, was continually preached up. It had been clearly shewn that they had never discovered any of this skill in sending ministers here. But if he might speak out, he would say, that the British had discovered more diplomatic skill in this country than any other nation, and that the present British minister had shewn more of it than any other. [The Speaker declared such remarks out of order] Mr. M. said, that it had been insinuated, that all those who wish to fraternize with France, and to pay them the 50,000l. which they demanded of us, would oppose all measures of this kind. He had himself never heard of a man willing to give a cent to France to procure peace. If France could believe there is a party in this country in her interest, she must have collected the belief from such observations as these.

It had been said, that certain gentlemen high in authority in this country, were privy to the departure of the gentleman who was lately in France. For aught he knew, these gentlemen might have named him. But it was a little extraordinary, said Mr. M. that in our discussions on this floor, we should be talking of an officer in our government being a traitor. Such kind of language can have no effect but to create suspicions in the minds of the people that that man is an enemy to his country; This does not look much like a wish to conciliate differences of opinion, but the contrary. If gentlemen possess proof of any mal-conduct in the person particularly alluded to, it is their duty to bring it forward and put him from the situation in which he is placed; and if any such could be brought, no man would be more desirous of seeing him displaced than he should. But if no such proof exists, it is a strange way of supporting the constituted authorities, thus to calumniate a man whom the people have thought proper to place in so high a station.

An expression had escaped the gentleman from South Carolina, who always spoke much of his American feelings, which he did not understand. He said, that during our revolutionary war, there were men who would have been ready to have purchased peace by submission. Surely the gentleman must have been mistaken, except he means such as were opposed to the revolution from the beginning. [Mr. Harper said he did mean those.] Every body knows, continued Mr. M. that such as took up arms against us, would have been willing to have purchased peace by submission.

For his own part, he saw no good to be answered by this law. He could not conceive how an individual could usurp the executive authority against the voice of the people of the United States, supported by all the force of the Union; and if any individual were so mad as to invite over a French army, he would find himself miserably deceived, if he expected any body in this country would join them. He did not think a single man could be found that would join a French standard. But if we were even in a state of war, and an individual could prevail upon our enemy to offer such terms of peace as our government would be willing to accept, it would be a good thing. He could himself conceive no situation in which such a law as proposed would operate; and as he believed our government as firmly fixed as the land we live on, he saw no necessity for any such measure.

Mr. N. Smith wished to make a few remarks in reply to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who had noticed some of his former observations. The gentleman had, in the first place, mistated his argument, and then answered it in his own way. It would be recollected that the gentleman from Virginia had stated to the house that if an individual had opened a correspondence with a foreign government for the benefit of his country, so far from its being criminal, it would be praise-worthy. In answer to this, Mr. S. said he had remarked, 'that it might be laid down as a general rule, that no foreign nation would open a correspondence with an individual, intending to favor the nation to which that individual belongs, because, if they were inclined to do this, they could do it through the legal organ. In answering this argument, the gentleman states it differently. He makes me, observed Mr. S. to say "that no government could ever, consistent with good faith, open a correspondence with such an individual." He had said no such thing. After differences arise, and one nation receives injuries from another, many indirect measures may be necessary to compel the offending nation to do justice. One nation may go to war with another consistent with good faith, but whoever heard of this being done to confer a favor? After thus misrepresenting his argument, he did not even attempt to answer it; but attempted to prove that our envoys had been guilty of misconduct. Mr. N. S. did not wish this use to be made of it. Did our envoys, said he, treat with a set of persons who declared they were not authorised by the French government? No; the persons with whom they negociated, said they were authorized by the government, and he had no doubt they were. They did not say, "our government will not treat with you; but we will, being of a different opinion from our government."

Mr. S. would notice one or two other inconsistencies in the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Aware that, he had gone too far in declaring that an individual might assume the executive authority, he attempts to qualify the doctrine. by saying that an individual may, but a party may not. What! an individual may do a favor to his country, yet several individuals may not! Strange inconsistency. It was astonishing that the gentleman could have suffered himself to support such an opinion.

The same gentleman had also told the house, that there is a difference between negociation and correspondence; and that a negociation must be criminal, but a correspondence may be perfectly proper. What is the difference! A man goes forward and corresponds with a foreign government with respect to subsisting differences betwixt it and the government of the country to which he belongs. What is this but negociating? And the gentleman from Virginia does not pretend to make any difference; because his argument was, that such a person could do no harm, because he could not conclude a treaty. In short, said Mr. S. the whole comes to this. If this nation and another are at war, and our enemy chuses rather to negociate with an individual than with the government with respect to peace, they may make one treaty after another, and cause them to be laid before the executive; and, if the argument of the gentleman is found, they must examine each of these treaties to see whether they are proper, or not. It is true, the government would not be bound to adopt any of these treaties, but they will be obliged to sit down, and form an opinion upon them.

Thus, the power of carrying on foreign negociations would be taken from the executive, and placed in the hands of any individual who might chuse to enter upon the business, which would be defeating a law placed in the President by the constitution of the United States, and which is so guarded, that even he cannot exercise it, without the concurrence of the Senate. And why, asked Mr. S. has the constitution been thus cautious? For this purpose; because these are matters which ought to be in skilful hands; and not in the hands of a novice. It was well known that foreign nations will always look well to their own interests, and that this nation ought to have persons of great ability and integrity, and persons who have the good of their country at heart, employed on their behalf. But if the gentlemen are right all this constitutional barrier is to be thrown down, and the business lie open to any one who will take it up. Mr. S. said, it was astonishing to him that the gentlemen who had always been for limiting the power of the President, should now advance a doctrine which gives power to individuals in direct opposition to the constitution. If this doctrine had come from gentlemen who have never been so scrupulous on this subject, it would not have appeared so strange; but, to come from those who have ever been so very jealous of an extention of power, is perfectly astonishing.

Mr. Harrison called for the reading of the act proposed to be amended; after the reading of which the yeas and nays were taken upon the resolution and it was carried 65 to 23.

MR. FENNO,

BE pleaſed through the medium of your uſeful paper, to tell the Houſe of Delegates, of the "great Dominion," that the United Iriſhmen who from an expectation of effectual ſupport, from the "great nation" had become extremely inſolent, have not only found their rebellion cruſhed, but have (except where the royal mercy prevented it) paid for their treaſon on the gallows; and that, as the exclusive patriots of the Houſe of Delegates of the great Dominion, cannot reaſonably expect any more effectual ſupport from the great nation, than their brother patriots, the United Iriſhmen have received, it is time for them to recollect, that we have both hemp and energy of government in this country. From the reſolutions of the Houſe of Delegates publiſhed in your paper of yeſterday, I expect, that hemp will ſoon be an article in high demand, and I therefore intend to raiſe a plentiful crop the next ſeaſon as a profitable article of ſpeculation.

MR. FENNO,

I am neither concerned in making gooſe-traps or catching gulls, but ſeveral having been contrived by a very ingenious gentleman now oppoſed to the eſtabliſhment of an inſtitution to correct and regulate his traps and ſave the gulls from the ſprings of his machines, I cannot withhold a word of obſervation on ſuch ſchemes.

I am told that a number of merchants agreed on a plan to enſure each other in ſuch a manner as to them ſeemed moſt ſatisfactory, being individually concerned in obtaining the beſt ſecurity and at the eaſieſt rate, for property they are in habits of hazarding at ſea, the plan of a new inſurance company was ſuggeſted, they will give the inſtitution employment by a preference of their buſineſs, and thereby participate in its good or ill fortune. If by its good conduct, candor and accommodation as to the credit for premiums and promptneſs in paying loſſes and averages without litigation or delay, it is obſerved to deſerve a general preference no doubt others will alſo apply to it for inſurance. That thoſe points are now much wanted, is generally confeſſed, and therefore to be looked for in the expected competition, by which as in every thing elſe the public may be better but cannot be worſe ſerved.

The lower premiums of inſurance are, the cheaper will all imported articles be brought to market, and exactly in the ſame ratio will our produce inhance in value for exportation, by being ſent at a cheaper rate to foreign markets.

The capital of this aſſociation muſt be employed, and the object of the contemplated and neceſſary loan ſeems moſt opportunely to offer itſelf for the purpoſe which will be a great facility to obtaining it on the one hand, and a very agreeable mode of uſing it on the other.

Convinced that by another of thoſe inſtitutions the public will be better ſerved as they may or may not employ it, I am only ſorry I am

MR. FENNO,

GIVE me leave, through your paper to congratulate the editor of the Aurora, upon the acquiſition of a new correſpondent.

From what has appeared in that paper within a few days, concerning the New-England Colleges, Sacrilege and General Wooſter's Widow, it is very evident that a certain ci-devant Portſmouth Clergyman, by the name of Ogden, a ſon-in-law of Mrs. Wooſter, and late tenant of one of the Priſons in the State of New-York is not far diſtant—

I will venture to conjecture, from the character given of Col. Lyon, in that paper of this morning, that if the truth ſhould ever be known it would appear, that this ſame diſappointed ex-clergyman was the bearer of the petition, in Col. Lyon's favor to the Preſident—

So natural is it for an ambitious diſappointed man to become a jacobin!!!

January 9.

A Jacobinical parſon now in this city, with a great deal of ſagacity, traces the differences which at preſent ſubſiſt between the United States and France, to the religious intolerance of the American people! The pulpit, he ſays, has conſtantly rung with embittering denunciations againſt the French religion—no wonder then that the French people were irritated!—Yet this mod ſt gownman calls himſelf an Epiſcopalian; declares war againſt the remaining prejudices in religion; and calls on his fellow laborers in the vineyard to co operate in exploding them—"elſe he will run away with the credit of the undertaking!" After this, it would not be ſurpriſing if the Great Nation ſhould add to the liſt of acknowledgements we are to make in order to pacify her—conceſſions for our clergymen having vilified the moſt holy GODDESS OF REASON!"—

Among other evidences of the wretched condition into which the AURORA and its patrons are fallen, is that of their being dependent for many of their moſt ſenſeleſs and lying paragraphs, on a crack'd brain'd, knaviſh Epiſcopalian Clergyman from Connecticut; who cannot ſtay at home, but leaves an amiable wife and family to ſuffer the want of common comforts, while he roams about the country on foot in ſearch of prey. Such fellows ſhould furniſh matter for the Aurora —there is A FITNESS OF THINGS in it, as Philoſophers ſay.

Dr. Logan has publicly acknowledged that he "carried two certificates of his citizenſhip from perſons who have been implicated with himſelf reſpecting his late journey to Europe. He is called upon to ſtate what were the contents of theſe certificates; whether they did not recommend him as a patriotic citizen, a firm republican, a friend to France, and as a man worthy of attention and confidence." If ſuch ſhould have been their purport it was indeed perfectly unneceſſary "to carry any meſſage, letter, or introduction, from any citizen in America to any citizen or public body in France." Theſe conſtituted his credentials and like the ſigns of the illuminati were no doubt well underſtood by the correſpondents of thoſe who "are implicated in his journey to Europe."

He ſays that "he never converſed with any perſon in France in their political capacity or as being in one himſelf." Is the man mad, or does he mean to inſult the underſtanding of the public by thus ridiculouſly playing upon the word converſe. Let him ſtate to the public in what capacity he preſented his memorial to the directory, and if he dare let him publiſh what were its contents.

THE PRESIDENT'S ANSWER

To the GENERAL ASSEMBLY of the State of MARYLAND.

GENTLEMEN,

AN eloquent addreſs, adopted by the two houſes of the general aſſembly of Maryland, and ſigned on the fourteenth of this month by Mr. Perry, the Preſident of the ſenate, and Mr. Chapman, the ſpeaker of the houſe of repreſentatives, has been preſented to me by Mr. Howard, one of your ſenators in congreſs, in the abſence of the other, Mr. Lloyd.

Convinced, as I have been, by an attentive obſervation of more than twenty years, that there is no ſtate in this union whoſe public affairs, upon all great national occaſions, have been conducted with more method, wiſdom and deciſion, or whoſe reſults have been the effect of a more comprehenſive and profound view of the ſubject, than thoſe of the ſtate Maryland, I cannot receive the aſſurances of your entire and cordial approbation of the meaſures of my adminiſtration, without a ſingular ſenſation of pride and pleaſure.

What ſhall I ſay to you, gentlemen, on the ſubject of deſtruction of religion and encouragement of looſe principles? I am not fond of introducing this ſacred topic into political diſquiſitions. But religion is the baſis of moral obligation—of the eſſenc of all government; the only ground of confidence between man and man, and the foundation of all ſociety. Without it the world would be a univerſal and perpetual war of artifice, intrigue, fraud, ſtratagem and violence, of all men againſt all men. This at leaſt is my opinion, tho' I ſhall not perſecute thoſe who differ from me.

When religious liberty has been aſſerted by invincible arguments of the ſoundeſt divines, as well as the philoſophers of this century and the laſt; when every engine of wit, ſatire, humor and ridicule, have been employed to diſcountenance intolerance, is the whole to terminate in a cruel and ſanguinary perſecution of all religion? In the annihilation of all the ſacred foundations of morality, government and ſociety? America will not, I truſt, be willing to be converted into a perfect bedlam, whatever other parts of the world may wiſh it.

At the time when, under every diſcouragement, I was called by the ſuffrages of very little more than half of the nation to the preſidency of the general government, I was fully aware of the dangers that ſurrounded us, and of the perplexities that awaited my adminiſtration. A reſponſibility which might be determined, as my election had been, by two or three votes, preſented itſelf before me, enough to have appalled a heart poſſeſſed of more fortitude than mine. But as the courſe of my life had led me for twenty years through ſcenes which afforded me, perhaps more than any other American opportunities of weighing the probable effects of the ſpaſms, convulſions and agonies of a great nation, broke looſe from all reſtraint, in the centre of Europe, I thought it might be as difficult for me as for any other to excuſe myſelf from the trial. The affectionate and ardent ſupport which I have received from my fellow-citizens, has appeared much earlier, and more unanimous, than my moſt ſanguine hopes had ever anticipated. In the generous and general declarations of ſatisfaction and approbation of my fellow-citizens, in all parts of the union, I have received a reward which I eſteem above all other perſonal conſideration in this life. Nothing of the kind has excited my gratitude more ſincerely than this magnanimous addreſs from the general aſſembly of Maryland Moſt cordially I wiſh you all health and happineſs.

"The Britiſh Parliament, which was to have aſſembled on the ſixth, was not to meet until the 20th November.

"It is expected that the Miniſter, in the courſe of future Taxation, will make INCOME inſtead of EXPENDITURE the Baſis; to this alteration he has been induced from many perſons having ſhamefully evaded the Tax by falſe Oaths.

"Lord Nelſon was a Lieutenant with Sir Peter Parker, in the American war, on board the Briſtol, of 50 guns, and preſent when Sir Peter was battering Charleſton, S. Carolina.

"The Conqueſt of the Venetian, Grecian, &c. iſlands of late unjuſtly taken poſſeſſion of by the French, ſeems to be a firſt object of the allied powers (Great Britain, Ruſſia and Turkey) and that CORFU, near the mouth of the Gulph of Venice, will be immediately intereſted.

"When Admiral Nelſon took leave of the King, previous to his preſent command, he was accoſted by a friend at the Levee, who ſaid, "I am afraid you will be too late for the Toulon fleet." "Don't mention it, (ſays the gallant Admiral) for I mean to have ample revenge for the loſs of my arm."

On Tueſday the 2d of October, 5000l. was paid in the Bank of England, in the name of his Majeſty, part of the annual Royal Contribution towards the exigencies of the nation during the war."

On 13th Dec. the city of Quebec was generally illuminated in conſequence of the brilliant victory gained over the French by Admiral Nelſon off the Mouth of the Nile. The following day the Artillery of the Garriſon was diſcharged in honor of the occaſion, and another illumination took place.

AT a meeting of the Officers of the 3d Regiment of Philadelphia County Militia, held at the houſe of Robert Allen, for the purpoſe of taking into conſideration, and nominating a certain perſon to ſerve as Lieutenant Colonel for ſaid Regiment, in the place of John Patterſon, removed.

Capt. GEORGE REES in the chair.

Reſolved unanimouſly, by the whole of the Officers of the 3d Regiment of Philadelphia County Militia, that Mr. PETER MIERKIN is a proper perſon to fill the ſtation of Lieutenant Colonel of the beforeſaid Regiment, and whom we promiſe to ſupport and recommend to our fellow citizens at the enſuing election.

GEORGE REES, Chairman.

GERALDER STOCKDALE, Sec.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9, 1799.

ALEXANDRIA, January 5.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Fredericksburgh, to the Editor of this paper.

"I have nothing important to communicate—politics are ſtill, except a little animadverſion occaſionally on our righteous aſſembly. If that auguſt body go on in their preſent career, the time may not be far diſtant, when Virginia ſhall become a ſecond Zurich. I have no doubt that there are thoſe among us, who would readily furniſh arms or ammunition to the requiſition of a French directory, even if they knew that the cruelties of Berne were to be renewed in Maryland or any of our ſiſter ſtates; or if Virginia itſelf was to be the theatre, I doubt if their conſcientious ſcruples would be arouſed by the bloody proſpect—No, they are blind to every thing but a rage for French equality, French irreligion, and French innovations and conquer."
